AMONG AND BETWEEN. . .

John Connally and I agree,

He survived a round through his back and wrist, and I've survived Cameron and Central Texas' incredible defiance of the 20th century.

He has been making statements, confirmed and denied, which equate the view a growing minority of independents feel about politics, the major political parties, the United Nations, Washington, among others. That minority is perhaps beyond 40 percent of the electorate on major candidacies, senator to president.

Connally said he thought a third party might be a viable possibility in the apparent pre-1976 standoff between Republican and Democrat. He denied then he meant that he might consider being a candidate for a third political force.

John Connally's on to something. Political parties at too many local levels are in the hands of flacks and hacks. And the local level is where the political revolution is brewing, though neither party may be competent enough at the local levels, beyond patronage, to see the dynamics of distrust rumbling abroad.

Connally stepped from the Democratic to the Republican Party after the 1968 elections. His decision probably was prompted by the summary treatment the Texas delegation got in Chicago in 1968. Without him or somebody like him, the 1972 Texas Democratic delegation appeared inept, unorganized, bumbling., if you will. And Richard Nixon was re-elected in 49 of the 50 states, including Texas.

Connally has served in two cabinets in two parties in two diverse jobs: Navy secretary under Kennedy the Democrat and Treasury secretary under Nixon the Republican. And Connally the man who survived bribery charges in a Washington trial is talking about the independent possibilities in 1976. His view of the New York City debacle prevailed over incumbent Treasury Secretary William Simon. The former Texas governor has more than political sense. He is intelligent.

Everyone wants to rely on their emotions and loyalties in politics and religion, but in this day it requires intelligence just to sort out the sortable, let alone the garbage counter forces throw at each other.

One politico justifies this by "keeping the faith." Another says "It's principle." Neither holds up too well.

John Connally may be anticipating a step between the two major parties. Things may be just confused enough that a man with the right timing may catch onto the independent fervor of a Bi-centennial year, citing an epoc 200 years ago when for practical purposes there were no political parties.

What the major parties are saying through the various levels of spokesmen is the name of their game is power, patronage, and plums. And what baffles both of them is that White House and Congress are having little luck in dealing with non-political professionals who actually run this country. And those are the bureaucrats.

And if Connally is reading the signs, like I read the signs since John Kennedy's assassination and nearly Connally's, there is ample reason to suspect a plurality vote in 1976 for some candidate of some party, perhaps a third, which harks back to the days of Teddy Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson, who won in 1912 with considerably less than 50 percent of the votes. Teddy was the "Bull Moose" party who siphoned votes from both majors, though not enough to win.

John Connally may be Teddy Roosevelt in stalking clothes. Some serious observers who look at the approximate 15 candidates for the Democratic nomination and the Ford-Reagan debate soon to begin are wondering if "we, the people," need all that. Observers wonder if a strong man who already has crossed from one party to another may not be a serious alternative.

I have read at least one at this early date. Natural mistrust in both parties for Connally's move from one to the other may just not apply if serious money agrees with the polls.

And for the major parties, the polls are serious. People are disillusioned. People are mad. And people are no longer blindly loyal to the Grand Old Party of Lincoln and Democratic politics inspired by Jefferson and Jackson.

Forty percent going on fifty are shopping around.

Loan, Grant Announced

Cong. W. R. Poage's office in Washington Thursday announced a loan of $650,000 and a grant of $555,000 from the Farmers Home Administration to the Southwest Milam Water Supply Corporation.

The funds will be used to enlarge the present system in and around the city of Rockdale. Three hundred and thirty new customers will be served by the expansion.

History Fair Set

World, American, and Texas history will be featured in projects shown Tuesday at the Yoe High School Junior Historian's annual History Fair at the National Guard Armory.

The fair will be held for three days, starting Dec. 8 and the public will be able to view the projects from 8 a.m. until 9 p.m. Tuesday.

Library Plans Additions

The library board meeting last Monday agreed to buy records with part of the state and federal funds due. It also plans to purchase prints of great art for a permanent art exhibit.

The art exhibit will be alternated with other art from local and area artists that come in for a monthly display.

Also planned for purchase are books for the library's science department. Mrs. Herbert Nance, with other science teachers, will recommend books for the science center.

School Board To Meet

Cameron school board members will meet for a regular session Monday (tonight) at 7:30 in the Ben Milam School office.

More Rain Needed For Winter Pastures

Scattered showers in Milam County Friday added moisture to small grains and pasture land that was needed, since only .71 inches of rain fell during November, and conditions are getting a little dry.

Unless December brings an abundance of moisture, the month of May will turn out to be the biggest rainmaker for 1975. A whopping 9.37 inches fell into the Water Department's official rain gauge during May to put it almost four inches ahead of October which recorded 5.57 inches.

The abundant rainfalls of May and October were boosted by over 3-inch rains that fell on May 24 and October 23. Officially measured amounts were 3.18 on May 24 and 3.50 on Oct. 23.

Total rainfall for the year so far in Cameron has been 36.90, which is about average, according to state statistics.

Normally dry July, August, and September produced 2.94, 3.00, and 3.68 respectively. June added 4.20 to the total, January 1.17, Februarv 2.54, March .92, and April 2.80.

December rains are needed to help wheat crops, an increasing acreage this year, and small grains such as oats and rye to be used for winter pastures. Good rains are also needed to help pastureland grasses come along for winter forage.

Fishing Therapy Works

ROSEBUD

A Rosebud minister, in the hospital for a back ailment, was treated by friends to a unique gift, in line with his love of fishing. A gallon jug was filled with tank water, a black molly placed in it and a shortened cane pole with a hook big enough for a small shark was added so he could fish in bed. Either the fishing or the treatment worked, for he was back visiting parishioners this week.

New Santa Suit Available

ROCKDALE

A new Santa Claus suit--a real gem valued at more than $150, has been provided for use by the Rockdale Chamber of Commerce as a civic gesture from the Rockdale VFW and VFW Auxiliary. Chamber secretary Dixie Farr said the new suit includes all the trimmings, including belt and boots, and a fine white beard and locks. The chamber has been searching in vain for its old Santa suit which was borrowed and never returned.

Hospital Campaign Opens

GEORGETOWN

The campaign for a new Georgetown Area Hospital officially pulled away from the starting line as Mearl V. Leffler contriubted $1,000 to the effort. J. H. Compton, general chairman of the fund drive, said that Leffler's donation was followed within eight hours by pledges totaling $55,000. Goal for the campaign is to raise $350,000.

Once Was Not Enough

CALDWELL

One is not enough, or at least so it seems for one deer hunter intent on violating the law. Game wardens arrested a man with a doe in his possession, fined him $405, and put him in jail when he was unable to pay. Relatives paid the fine and early the next morning the same man was arrested by game wardens in the next county for possession of an illegal deer. He again went to jail when he was unable to pay his fine.

Christmas Toys

Displays Show New Ones, Old Favorites

Old familiar toys are still favorites and will be for a long time, according to a survey of toy departments of local variety stores. Newcomers are also receiving a lot of attention, especially in the doll department.

"Baby-That-Away" is the hottest selling doll this year, store managers said. The doll, which is selling out, is run by a battery and crawls for its owner's entertainment. However, stores have a wide selection of dolls this year, ranging from the tiny to a nearly life-size with hair that can be styled.

Barbie and Ken are still around, with a version of Ken with mod hair, and Malibu Barbie and Ken with deep suntans. Barbie also can have her own beach bus, plane, and a camping outfit.

A "Nina Ballerina" turns in classic poses as a handle is turned, and walking and cuddly dolls also await some little girl's pleasure.

Old fashioned tea sets come in a variety of colors and patterns, and modern cooking sets are also featured. An "Easy Bake Oven" is still a youngster's favorite as it really cooks food and mixes are furnished with the oven or available separately.

For boys, racing sets with miniature cars speeding around a twisting or oval track are much in evidence, along with "Richochet Racers," electric football game, baseball bats and balls, and models.

The models depict modern racing cars, the carrier "Midway," Huey Helicopter, planes, cycles and others. The gun and holster sets are again available but losing popularity as fewer westerns are shown on TV these days.

The ever-popular Tonka Toys are there, with sturdy bulldozers, graders, dump trucks, car carrier, jeep with boat, front end loader, and farm equipment, both large and small. And the classic red wagon, Radio Flyer, is still selling in sizes ranging from the very small to one large enough to carry the kids around.

For the family, games of Chinese checkers, backgammon, checkers, and dominoes can take care of many a shopping list. Jigsaw puzzles are also popular for any age. And for budding artists, there are paint by number sets along with coloring books for the very young.

Riding toys for tots fill shelves and are tried out by young shoppers when they can escape mom's eye. The ever-popular "Inchworm" in bright green is available along with "Happy Hopper," a child's version of a grasshopper to ride on.

Old favorites such as plastic telephones and Lincoln Logs still get some attention along with all-wood train for tots. Small stocking stuffers include tiny dolls, balls, cars, harmonicas, bubble mixture, and play dough.

Featured at another store's toy department are the popular "Rock'em Sock'em Robot," along with the favorite for males of any age, a pool table, in varying sizes.

And electric trains never go out of style for both boys and their dads. Train sets range from the beginners, with a simple oval track, to the more complex set with extra lengths of track, controls, and a wide variety of cars.

Cameron stores offer much to the local and area shopper, and there is no need to go out of town to fill that Christmas shopping list.

Spray Available For Safe Christmas Trees

Cameron volunteer firemen are sponsoring the spraying of Christmas trees to make them flame-retardant and there is no charge for the service.

The tree, no matter where purchased, should be taken by the Farm & Ranch Store at 511 W. Batte to be sprayed during store hours.

THESE YOUNGSTERS are doing a little pre-Christmas wishing in a local variety store where wide selections of toys are filling the shelves. The children were with their mother who was doing some Christmas shopping while selections are at their best.

Building Anew...

Cameron is going to build a civic center.

Discussions on size, location and design have been underway by civic committee for several months. And public organization is surfacing with Mayor Blake's request that City Council come up with a steering committee to take the center beyond conjecture.

Perhaps a year ago, one councilman began looking into grant sources for construction. Cameron is talking about a complex of perhaps three - quarters of a million dollars.

It is justified at several levels. Cameron Independent School District has no auditorium for numerous school functions for music, drama, entertainment, special events.

The flat-floored armory has served as an auditorum even for Dallas Symphony Orchestra beyond the intent of its architects. Cameron itself needs an auditorium.

Beyond the civic community, the business-professional community can make use of an auditorium and related facilities. It would be a sort of center for school-municipal functions beyond anything the town has heretofore been able to consider.

It seems apparent that city officials feel the time is here to put the issue to public organization and support. We agree.

This is another project which promises service to so many elements of the area for perhaps a half century. It is another project among so many undertaken by Cameron's "generation of builders."

More Than Econonics...

This newspaper speaks often to "class", and it is sometimes misinterpreted, sometimes intentionally.

The Herald's reference to class is more than economics. And anybody with a high school education and a few years of adulthood knows excellence has no price tag nor any limit imposed by finance. That is a misnomer of a money - oriented society, hyped up by the Texas tradition of bigger is better, when it really suggests a massive inferiority complex salved only by money.

"Class" is a state of mind which creates performance, based on the abilities, the means and motivation at hand. Money may be a consideration, but it is not the only consideration.

For example, we think this edition of the Cameron football Yoemen is the best this community ever produced, and potentially one of the best small-to-medium high school football teams this football-mad state has produced.

Money didn't create that potential. It helped, of course. But talent and size and organization and desire are generating that potential. The money goes with the action.

This is true of individuals, of towns, of Texas, of this country. Class is as class does. The belly-achers and envious are the ones constantly crying "bad deal" or "poor start" or "tough breaks" or "just luck."

It is not true that every school boy or girl can be president or an entrepreneur of a professional or a major success. Unfortunately, that disallusion is taught in our classrooms.

What this town, this state and this nation promise is a chance. That's all. And that's what it's all about. And if the "stuff" takes shape and is better and continues to be better until there "ain't" any better, then that is class.

But it is more than economics. It's excellence. And the price is a lifetime perhaps, failure perhaps, life itself perhaps.

These days, those who still have "it" somehow have earned it.

PARIS

The French armed forces, finally settling down to peacetime chores after action in indochina and Algeria, now face a challenge to authority within their own ranks. The challenge comes from the country's highly militant leftwing movements which are mounting an offensive to become a major force among France's 300,000 young conscripts.

New York Regarded As Foreign By Outsiders

By Barry May

NEW YORK Reuter--In Times Square, spiritual heart of New York, a defiant message proclaims in bright lights that the city will never die.

On the revolving newscaster that gives New Yorkers the latest international headlines, the lights spell out: "President Ford -- New York will never lay down and die. . .one Times Square says rally, New Yorkers--we're still the greatest city in the world. . ."

The message is a signal that, regardless of the President's reluctance to bail out the near-broke city with federal aid, New York is special.

New Yorkers, whether they be immigrant Italians, Irish, Eash European, Jews, Germans, Chinese, Puerto Ricans, or even native-born, like to call their city the "Big Apple."

"That's because it meant it's the greatest city," city hall explains to enquirers. "When you're in the big apple, you're in the big time."

Wags recite another definitions of the big apple: "Shiny on the outside and rotten to the core."

West of the Hudson River, the rest of the United States seems to regard New York, the country's financial and cultural capital and biggest sea and air port, as a foreign entity.

"New Yorkers are not the most loveable people in the republic," a midwest editor wrote recently. "They tend to suffer from delusions of superiority, and they talk with a funny accent," said Charles Bailey, editor of the Minneapolis Tribuen.

"The city's government is notably inefficient, profligate and corrupt. The air is foul. The streets are choked with traffic,paved with refuse and riddled with chuckholes," he added.

Another newspaperman offered beleaguered New Yorkers a list of 16 instructions should they plan to travel in America.

Columnist Russell Baker cautioned readers of the New York Times : "Do not mug anybody," and "Do not take offense at New York jokes."

"New Yor k is the only foreign country Americans can make jokes about anymore without being accused of bigotry," he said.

This was the sort of joke to be expected from Americans, said Baker: "Why does it take three New Yorkers to write a cheque? It takes one New Yorker to do the writing and two to hold it down so it won't bounce until he's finished."

Tuning in to any of the 13 televisions channels or 69 radio stations that broadcast daily in 17 languages to this polglot metropolis, listerners can hear advertisers give their addeess as "New York, New York"--the city and the state--as though to emphasize that this is the very essence of the essence.

Lately, however, the financial crisis and the deteriorating standard of daily life are starting to turn the big apple sour.

Rides in the big yellow taxis that ply the city's streets can be a punishing experience as they bounce in and out of the potholes that pit the roads.

The driver collects the fare through a now-familiar small hole in a bullet-proff screen that protects him from troublesome passengers. A sign warns that he carries no more than five dollars change --insurance against robbers.

On the subways, used by fewer and fewer people because of unemployment, deteriorating neighborhoods and increased fares, patrolling policemen eye passengers warily and prod unconscious drunks with their nightsticks.

The outside of the underground trains are decorated with the exotic calligraphy of a netherworld, daubed and sprayed on by undetected hands when the trains return to their sheds.

Up on the streets, the night-long wail of sirens--police cars, fire engines, and ambulances racing to emergencies--disturb the peace as they echo down the concrete, steel, and glass canyons of midtown Manhattan.

Fire commissioner John O'Hagan admitted that "In the last analysis, the cuts will result in an increase in loss of life and property."

Michal Maye, president of the Uniformed Firefighters Association, commented: "Where we used to be able to save a building, we're now losing entire blocks."

China Stresses Economic Growth

By David Rogers

PEKING Reuter--The years between Richard Nixon's 1972 trip to Peking and President Ford's visit have been one of the quietest chapters in the turbulent history of Communist China.

The tortuous ideological campaigns continue but this decade has witnessed nothing to compare with the internal convulsions of the late 1950s or the cultural revolution in the mid-1960s.

As policy makers draw up a new five-year plan, China appears to be steering a more pragmatic course that stresses the importance of economic growth.

Day-to-day administration is largely in the hands of moderate leaders generally identified with ailing Premier Chou En-Lai, now confined to his bed.

For the time being, Chairman Mao Tse-Tung's famous edict to carry out permanent revolution does not look like taking a disruptive form.

Observers believe the new five-year plan to be launched in January will reflect the cautious character of senior Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-Ping, the third-ranking state leader, and contain few experiments.

A recent national conference on agriculture hinted at tighter central control. It made farm mechanization a major objective and urged better management.

A tough speech from Security Minister Hua Kuo-Feng advised delegates to look at the composition of grass-roots revolutionary (management) committees and expel bad elements.

"It amounted to a license to purge the dead wood from positions that affect agricultural production," said one western diplomat.

Despite adverse weather, China expects another record grain harvest this year in the region of 270 million tons. But this is barely enough.

To keep pace with a two percent population growth, grain production must increase by about five million tons annually from the skimpy evidence available, this target has only just been met.

Exhortations to "Learn from tachai"--China's model commune in northern Shansi --and daily propaganda about building up agriculture show Peking's preoccupation with feeding its 800 million citizens.

A foreign exchange shortage limits China's ability to buy large quanitites of grain on the internatonal market.

Law Center To Draw Visitors

The more than 250,000 students who visited the State Capitol each year will have a new and interesting place to visit when the new Texas Law Center is completed, John M. Lawrence III, State Bar president said.

Located in the Capitol Complex and set to be dedicated on July 4, 1976, the new Law Center's first floor will contain an historical pavilion and a multi-media theatre.

The multi-media persentation will focus on the history of the legal system, how it developed, and where it is headed, Lawrence said. It will run continuously throughout the day so touring students and adults alike can view it.

Included in the historical pavilion will be many legal documents and artifacts pertaining to the law, he added.

Lawrence said the new Texas Law Center will also be the headquarters for the State Bar of Texas, which represents the nearly 27,000 Texas lawyers. It will also be the center for such programs as pre-paid legal services, lawyer referral, legal specialization, and law-focused education.

Day-Care Progam Offered In Sweden

By Victor Kayfetz

STOCKHOLM

Reuter--More than half of Swedish women with preschool age children are working mothers--and the government is planning invest heavily on expanding its day-care program.

But opinion is divided on the effects of young children of day-care centers.

A working mother who sends her three-year-old to a center says youngsters there are well-adjusted and learn to communicate better.

A mother who prefers to stay at home with her two young children says youngsters who spend their days in centers are often love-starved.

Among the programs that Sweden, one of the world's most advanced countries in social services, is considering is a six-hour work day for parents of pre-school age children.

At a typical day-care center in Stockholm, the children spend the day at play in organized discussions, baking cakes, watching television, and helping the adult staff to clean up.

Inger Rindsjoe, 27, lives with her husband Johan and her three-year-old son Kalle on the outskirts of Stockholm. She and Johan both work full time, and Kalle has attended a day-care center since he was five months old.

"Kalle lives his own life at the center," said Mrs. Rindsjoe. "He's proud of it. I can't deny my child his right to live a life of his own. Kalle can't choose his parents, but by having the chance to establish close relationships with other people he has a free choice."

"You can see how their social development has taken place more quickly than with children who started there at a later age," she said.

"They don't just grab things, but ask and discuss with the other children first. Youngsters at day-care centers learn much better how to communicate, through daily conflict situations. But there should always be grown-ups there to lead them, to point out solutions," she added.

She is critical of women who choose to stay at home with their children. "They build up a whole world around the home--nothing is allowed to intrude."

But not all mothers believe in day-care centers.

Marianne Rocklind, 29, is a housewife with two small children at home in a village near Stockholm and she studies child psychology in her free time.

She said : "Many parents close their eyes to conditions at their children's day-care center. Many children in centers are love-starved--they cannot possibly establish good contact with adults if there are two staff and 17 children as is often the case."

Mrs. Rocklind said she did not want to work outside the home. "I don't consider it a stimulating form of liberation to work at the check-out counter of the local supermarket if I thereby lose touch with my children. I think parents who work full time are too tired to maintain good emotional contact with them"

The Ministry of Health and Social Welfare estimates that publicly-subsidized child care including a planned expansion, will cost Sweden about seven billion dollars during the next six years.

Prime Minister Olof Palme says his government favors reducing the work day for parents of pre-school children to six hours. He added that if technical problems could be solved, the reform might go into effect by 1978.

This propserous county of eight million people has experienced recurring labor shortages, and women are the only large remaining labor reserve.

New income tax incentives have made it financially worthwile for wives to work, but inadequate child care facilities have created a bottleneck in getting them into the labor market.

Today, municipally-run day care centers can accommodate only 66,000 of Sweden's 800,000 pre-school children. Family day nurseries, where the local authority pays a housewife to take care of a small group of pre-school children, accommodate another 50,000.

Parents register their children for a day-care center as soon as they are born. Local authorities usually give preference to children of single mothers.

Depending on family income, those who have children in day-care centers or family nurseries pay from nothing to about six dollars a day for the first child and somewhat less for each additional child.

Studies have shown that the average child in a Swedish day-care center or family nursery spends between nine and 10 hours there each day, a figure regarded as much too much,

A feeling that both parents should spend more time with their children during their formative years has led Swedish public opinion to favor a shorter working day instead of higher pay.

While the Social Democratic government favors a six-hour day for parents of pre-school children, the labor unions and the Social Democratic Women's Organization would prefer to wait until a six-hour day is economically feasible for all workers, probably by about 1985.

Ten Tips For Happy Holidays

These tips of happy holidays in the home were issued by the American Association of Industrial Nurses whose 8,500 members help keep the nation's working men and women safe, healthy, and on their jobs away from home:

1. List pre-holiday projects. Assign deadlinesas your work and energy are evenly paced.
2. Take a 15-minute break from holiday chores--morning and afternoon.
3. Bend at the knees instead of the waist to lift heavy holiday boxes.
4. Wear glasses as prescribed. They can block out foreign particles just as safety glasses do in industry.
5. Use a steady stepladder or stool when putting up and taking down holiday decorations.
6. Fortify yourself with a good breakfast. Employees who do, tend to make fewer mistakes, have fewer accidents, are less irritable.
7. Learn all about your gift appliances and equipment. Any tool or mechanism is safer, more efficient in knowle able hands.
8. Resist rich holiday foods if pounds are a problem. Over-indulgence from Thanksgiving through New Year's can result in crash dieting, which can lead to trouble.
9. Refuse to be cheated on sleep. Short-changed several nights in a row, go to bed extra early the next night.
10. Give up something. Place this at the top of your New Year's Resolution.

Nature Knows Best

Scientists have yet to find a synthetic preservative more efficient than that found naturally in western red cedar lumber.

Small Town Moves Toward Better Life For Its Citizens

THE HARRIE P. WOODSON Memorial Library was completed as a Bicentennial project and is in its first year of operation. The idea for the library originated with Caldwell people but will serve the entire county.

At a time when people are moving toward small towns, small towns are having to get on the move.

One such town is Caldwell, the Burleson county seat, where according to John Wortham, Chamber of Commerce manager, citizens are beginning to realize that they must be able to offer jobs to the people who wish to settle there.

Wortham said many of their young adults getting out of school wish to settle in their hometown, but have not been able to because of the limited job opportunity. Unemployment in Burleson County is 9.2.

There is a definite need to bring in some new industry. Thus the Chamber of Commerce is "actively and aggressively" pursueing small industries that could locate in Caldwell.

Caldwell is fortunate in being centrally located on the intersection of two major Texas highways and both the Santa Fe and Southern Pacific Railroads.

The Burleson County Indistrial Foundation, formed in the early 1960's under the leadership of D. L. Alford, made 80 acres with water, sewer, electricity and paved streets available for locating industries. They built a building now occupied by Keller Ladder and Keller Chair Manufacturing Company.

Nagel Coat Hanger factory, also located in Caldwell, has not only benefited the town, but the entire county because of the very stable part it plays in the area economy, according to Mrs. D. L. Alford, Jr.

These industries have permitted many area people to remain on their farms and farm part time while adding necessary income through factory jobs.

Another major concern of the town is providing adequate medical facilities for area residents. According to City Manager Johnny Smith, the present local hospital facilities have been outgrown and the building can not be renovated. Proposed plans are to go to a taxing hospital district form of management and build a 3 to 4 doctor clinic and a larger hospital.

Ten acres of land and $25 thousand dollars have been donated to the cause as well as some medical equipment which will be sold to raise more money. Local fund drives will start soon to raise still more of the needed money.

Other new developments in the town include a library and a park. The Burleson County Library is in its first year of operation after the City Council, with the help of the Chamber of Commerce and the county chose it as a Bicentennial goal.

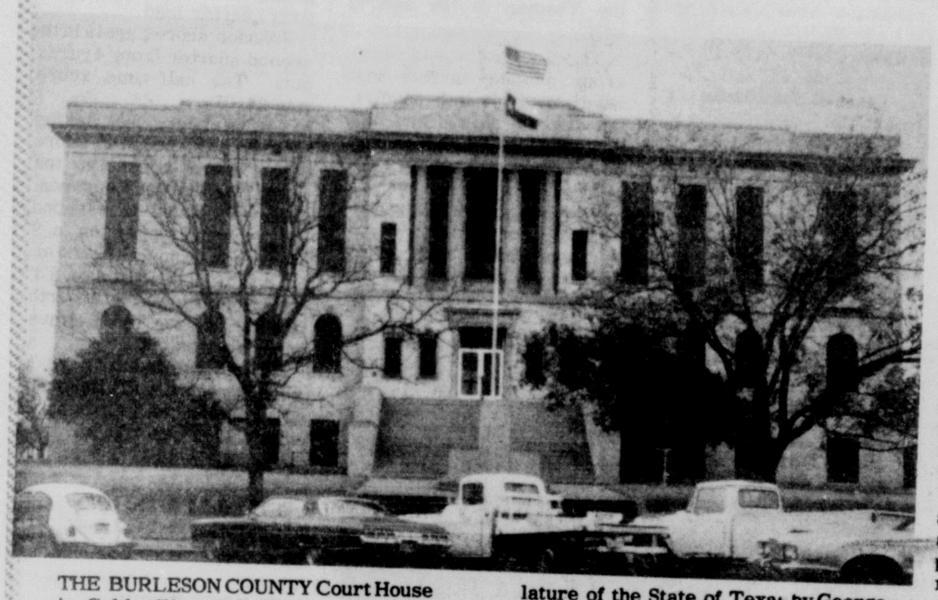
The library is now leasing a small building that it has already outgrown. Smith reports that they hope to either renovate the present facility or build anew.

Caldwell's newly completed park has 3 tennis courts, a ball park and 'Munchkin Land' with playground equipment for children. An open air pavillion, with material furnished by the city, was built with no labor charge by the A&M Architectural Construction Department.

The County Historical Association has opened a museum in the courthouse. One room is filled with encased artifacts. The museum also has two alcoves-one decorated in the Victorian style and the other a replica of an old Burleson County farm kitchen. The museum is open on Friday afternoons from 2-5 p.m.

Many of the small towns in the area have reported a growing number of people wishing to leave the large city and settle in their small towns. In the case of Caldwell, the trend seems to have done much to activate the town. It has managed to keep its small town freshness that people are looking for yet allowed progress to keep it from facing the long and slow death of a small town.

A WOODEN BRIDGE leads to the new park that stands beside the Santa Fe Depot on land leased from the railroad. Revenue sharing money helped build the tennis courts for thepark with free labor done by the community.



THE BURLESON COUNTY Court House in Caldwell's original town square is pictured above. The county was created out of land from Milam and Washington Counties in 1846 after a bill was presented to the first legislature of the State of Texas by George B. Erath who also platted the town of Caldwell in 1840, and named it for the old Indian fighter Matthew "Old Paint" Caldwell.

You may never live it down, but you can sure live it up.

Sometimes people who don't buy U.S. Savings Bonds say funny things to people who do.

"No will power?"

"Scared of the future?"

"You call that interest?"

"You know what Louie said about them?"

So who's Louie and who cares?

Fact is that U.S. Savings Bonds now offer you 6% interest when held to 5-year maturity. And nothing is safer.

You can even save for them automatically through your Payroll Savings Plan at work. What could be easier?

You're the one who'll live it up. Because you've got it.

Series E Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (4½% the first year). Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

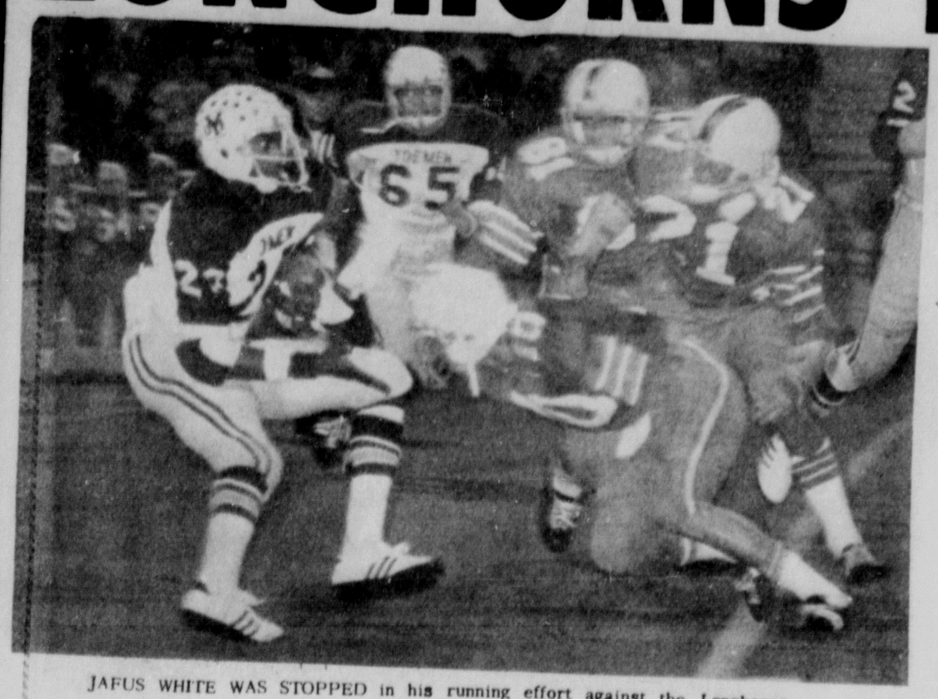
LONGHORNS TOPPLE NO.1 YOE, 14-6



JAFUS WHITE WAS STOPPED in his running effort against the Longhorns.

All 12 of the thrills of victory ended prematurely of that big thrill of a state championship with Ham - shire-Fannett out-fencing the Cameron Yoemen in the state AA quarterfinals Saturday at Tully Field, 14-6. All the scoring came in the first 24 minutes.

It was the kind of agony of defeat that stole that No. 1 ranking the Yoemen had so well protected in the 12 previous outings to find a stop-gate in what looked like just another easy step to taking that state crown without a blemish.

Just as everything had gone picture-perfect one week prior the Yoemen found out how it felt to be out-scored, out-offensed, and altogether beaten.

Longhorn quarterback #10 Les Koenning looked like he had been chosen to be a one man team; passing, running, defending, picking off 2 Yoe passes, and just anything he wanted to do. He threaded the needle for 114 yards in the passing department, completing 10 of 15 tosses with one interception.

It was hard to tell if the Longhorns had suited anyone else up besides their do-in-all quarterback. To top that he is just a junior. He guided the running game to 128 yards and tallied 19 first downs.

The gusty cool breeze chilled the Cameron offense with Michael White's passing spree gaining 100 yards. The Yoe running game was good for 84 yards. White was 8 for 18 in pass completions and had 2 intercepted.

Jafus White gained 37 yards in 13 carries while Aaron Miller found the astroturf to be slicker than a slip and slide gaining 29 yards in 9 carries. Joey Mondrik gained 4 yards and scored the only Yoe TD.

Yoe took the kickoff to open the game but were forced to punt after three downs and the Longhorns couldn't generate on their first possession. Yoe fumbled the punt into the end zone, and what it looked like it was going to be ruled a safety but after a short conference it was placed on the 20.

The Yoemen were again forced to punt and the Longhorns took possession on their 29. In just 10 plays and 4 minutes the Longhorns had done what the last 7 teams that the Yoemen had played had found to be impossible.

The Horns had the scoring savie and understood the definition of how to score on the 'unscoreables.' Plus, they made it look easy. On a 2nd down and 8 from the 8 Koenning tossed one of the many to Les Foreman to score on their second possession. Billy Melancon, #33, toed the PAT and the Horns took their lead, 7-0.

It was a quick retaliation from the Maroon, taking the ball on the kickoff and marching down he astroturf for a score.

It looked as though the Yoe offense was beginning to click with that high-stepping precision that had gained them 377 points during the season.

The drive started late in the first quarter but stemmed mid-way into the second quarter. In fourteen plays the Yoemen had driven the 66 yard distance and on a 1st down and goal from the one, Joey Mondrik squeezed in behind David Fincher for the six. Mondrik's try for the PAT was blocked and the Longhorns still maintained a 7-6 lead with 8:26 remaining.

On the Longhorns next possession the final score of the night was to be tallied. Ham shire-Fannett started their drive deep in their territory with the pigskin resting on the 17. With 8:20 showing on the clock the Longhorns capped another TD in just 5 minutes and 41 seconds. It happened again. The Yoe fans were silenced with a scoring spree that had been seen since the Rockdale game.

In 16 plays, a balance between the running attack and the aerial attack, the Longhorns had broken that magic line for 6. Melaneon's PAT was signaled good and the Longhorns went ahead 14-6.

All wasn't lost as the Yoe High Band put on another one of those standing ovation style half-time shows. The all new half-time show drew a standing ovation from the Longhorn fans and the Cameron fans.

Jerry Bartley's showy band has gained praise from school officials and visiting fans throughout the year, and Saturday night was no exception.

The second half looked like war-time manuvers, with the Yoemen trying to salvage some of the first half's wreckage. But the Horn defense had slept with #20, #32 on their minds and White and Miller had more visitors than Gerald Ford on his China visit.

In last year's try for the quarterfinals it went to the wire--all the way down to 6 seconds. But the Longhorns, with the multiple sets made it multiple problems for the Yoemen in the second half.

The Longhorns had numerous scoring threats that never made it into paydirt, but the 14 points and ball control were enough to outdo the Yoemen.

The Ham shire-Fannett Longhorns will meet the LaGrange Leopards in the State AA semi-finals next week. Late word, according to unofficial Ham shire-Fannett sources, said that the game would be played in the Astrodome in Houston on Saturday.

LaGrange Advances To Semi's

Quarterfinals turned out not to be such a big deal with the LaGrange Leopards Friday night when they ran rampant over Hebbronville 47-0.

The next step in the manual is how to big the "show-offs" when they meet Hampshire-Fannett in the state schoolboy semi-unals.

Johnnie Johnson was running wild, scoring three TDs and backing up the defense that gave up only 11 first downs and 136 yards rushing.

The only question in the minds of the Hebbronville fans was just how bad the thrashing was going to be. The Leopards scored on four of their first five possession with Shelby Willett putting in the firt TD on a 15 yard scamper.

Johnson blasted in from 4 yards out followed by Hatfield on a one yard plunge giving the Leopards a 20-0 first quarter lead.

Johnson scored again in the second quarter from 4 yards out. The half-time score was 26-0.

Setting back, just taking it easy was enough to score three more times in the second half for the Leopards. Johnson opened the second half scoring spree on a 9 yard pass from QB Hatfield.

Then Willett scored on a 4 yard run followed by a fourth quarter score by Kalmus from 4 yards out.

The Leopards have a 12-1 season record while Hebbronville closed out their season with a 11-1 record.
